New Zealand Secondary Schools Cross Country Championships

by Michael Jacques

A crystal clear Saturday on Napier's Anderson Park; joggers trot laps, young families picnic with the ducks, elderly couples stroll among the trees. And on this particular weekend in June, 2476 teenage feet splash through the slop of 1997's New Zealand Secondary School's Cross Country Championships.

Samuel Marsden College student Kate McIlroy dominated the senior girl's race

Always the visual high point of New Zealand running, these championships have been the one stable element within our sport; 1500 odd high school kids travelling to a different location every year for the sole purpose of running three, four or six kilometres of hill and dale. A weekend away with friends and, for the talented few, a chance to test themselves against the nation's best. Indeed for some a New Zealand Secondary School title holds more significance than the official New Zealand Junior title, case in point being Wellington College's Ben Ruthe. The Junior winner in 1995, Ruthe's goals since have revolved around winning the much coveted senior title, the sixteen year old commenting, "since the third form this has been the title I've wanted more than any other."

Ruthe, though, isn't the only talented kid with such dreams; kids and dreams which win or lose seem, none the less, to find their way onto rugby fields, netball courts, office blocks and OE's; anywhere it would seem but running tracks. For, despite the consistent popularity and high standards of secondary school competition, the number of juniors and young adults within New Zealand's club system remains desperately light; there being absolutely no entries for this year's national women's U/20 3000m championship, a sad example of the fact. But what to do? In a country that presents its recreationally minded youth with so many options, perhaps we should be content with the fact that while these kids may not remain runners they at the very least and for the most part, will grow with the benefits of a recreational lifestyle.

Fortunately it's not all bad news, for an appraisal of 1997's front runners gives one hope for the future. Napier's medallists were dedicated kids with dreams of track and field achievement, kids for whom conversation revolves less around the usual cars, hair cuts and relationships than around training, racing, shoes and running magazines. Kids with enough talent that when, as adults, they're asked the inevitable, "so what is it that you do?", they'll feel compelled to reply, "Oh, I'm a runner!"

That these front runners are the chosen few is without question, but how a single school can year after year produce such talent is a question well worth the ask. Ben Ruthe and Nick Buck are the latest of a long line of track and field champions to emerge from within the halls, class rooms and playing fields of Wellington College. Dominant winners of their respective senior and junior championships in Napier, their successes, nonetheless, were overshadowed by the successes of the teams of which they were a part. Of six available titles Wellington College took home five, having to settle for a 'mere' third in the remainder!

Ben Ruthe well clear in the senior boys

Leading his school's efforts by example and as captain, was Ben Ruthe. Following 1995's junior win with a runner up in his first year as a senior last year, Ruthe, it would seem, was indeed destined eventually to be senior champion. However, to do so he had first to dispense Adrian Blincoe, the runner with who two years previously became the youngest ever to win the senior title. Ruthe, though, more than lived up to his well suited name, employing a 'Ruthe'less, run with me if you can strategy.

Relaxing toward the end of the first of three laps, Ruthe gave fleeting hope to a strung out bunch that, with the Wellington College runner remaining at the front, quickly became a lead pack. With the wind behind him, however, Ruthe was back up on his toes; using 1:53 800m speed to break clear of a bunch clearly struggling to counter the confidence of his surging. Having been caught napping, at the back of what a minute ago had been the lead pack, co-favourite Blincoe spent the best part of a kilometre threading his way through the remains of the pack and up to the shoulder of the front runner, only upon arrival to have Ruthe surge clear once again, this time for good.

Leading bunch in the senior boys

At the line it was all Ben Ruthe and the title of which he'd dreamed, a mixture of joy and relief evident both in his ear to ear grin at the chanting of his Wellington College supporters, and in his comments post race, "I've had a thigh injury and been sick, so I didn't really know what to expect. My only plan was to run as hard as possible for two laps and take it from there.

This was the race I wanted to win this season, so I guess I came right just in time". "Just in time" is right, for the all round fitness of Ben Ruthe is to be tested to the limit this winter, the Scottish Harrier commenting, "I've been cross country training up to now but with the Oceania Games 800m coming up I'm on the track for four weeks starting Monday, then it's back to cross country for the national U/18 champs".

Following in the foot steps, it would seem, of Ben Ruthe is school mate Nick Buck. Winning the Junior title by a similarly wide margin to that of Ruthe in 1995, Buck used the same catch me if you can tactics to run away from New Zealand Secondary School Triathlon Champion Sam Walker. Supported by team mate Hayden Prosser in fourth, Buck led his team to both the three and six person titles, Wellington College's juniors showing the way, ahead of the first and third of their senior schoolmates.

Vanessa Jackson, out on her own

Vanessa Jackson was equally dominant amongst junior girls, the St Cuthbert's student following local hope Kirsty Turnball through a fast opening kilometre before simply running away for a win easier than the eleven second margin might indicate. However, on a day of dominating champions, none as more so than Samuel Marsden College senior Kate Mclroy.

The youngest of the Wellington Harrier Club's currently untouchable women, Mclroy has a front running style reminiscent of that of her coach and club mate, Olympic finalist Anne Hare. Following the ambitious start of 800m stand out Kelly Edge, Mclroy assumed the lead after 500m and instantly there was day light back to a strung out chase pack.

At the front of that pack, and chasing hard following a conservative start, was much crowned New Zealand champion Odette Jesson. Favourite for this race, but having of late lost training to the latest of winter's bugs, Jesson by halfway had bridged the gap to just five metres. Try as she did, however, the Rangitoto student was not able to settle on the shoulder of her younger adversary and those five metres became first ten, then twenty, fifty and eventually one hundred metres. Kate Mclroy added this senior cross country to her junior cross country and track titles of last year. Jesson was the same twenty-two seconds clear of Kelly Edge in third, the Wairarapa speedster nabbing her third cross country medal in as many years with the late rush one would expect of a national senior 800m champion.

And late rushes are what the finish lines of New Zealand Secondary School Cross Country Championships are all about, hundreds of kids cheered on by big crowds amongst which can be seen some of the sport's more notable faces; messrs Lindroos, Potts, Prince, Pilone and Costley among them this year. Though Phil Costley, manning the PA as part of Napier's organisation, would best be advised against giving away his day job! "Ben Ruthe followed by a young chap from Kings College and the little guy in red", a sample of the Fletcher Marathon champion's broadcastings skills! Encouraging, however, to see some of the nation's movers and shakers assisting in the development of grass roots cross country, though no more so than the sight of 1500 odd kids sprinting for the placing and point that might make their school one of the nation's best, a sight that makes the New Zealand Secondary School Cross Country, cross country at its best!

Wellington Boys College - Exceptions to the rule

by Michael Jacques

New Zealand's Secondary School Cross Country, year after year our sports greatest show case. Visions of a nation's raw talent, pushing, shoving and elbowing for a spot in the limelight, a slice of peer group adulation; but mostly for a position amongst the hundreds that storm from the starters gun every year.

You would imagine, then, these secondary school championships, as breeding grounds for the next generation of champions; schools feeding clubs with this raw talent. Not necessarily so, for such is the nature of secondary school education, and the teenagers within, that no sooner does a runner scratch at the surface of their potential, than they're gone; lost to the big wide world of varsity, career and relationships, in short, life.

You might well imagine, then, these same stumbling blocks applying to a secondary school's athletic system; no sooner does a coach develop a successful squad, than life whisks it away. History shows few schools dominate for more than a year or two, before being forced into rebuilding, or worse still, notching up their success as glory years never to be repeated.

However, as with most things teenage, there is one glaring exception to this rule. In the twenty-four years of the New Zealand Secondary School Cross Country Championships, Wellington Boys College have been that exception.

While other schools come and go, Wellington College has collected no less than seventy-three medals, twenty-four having had the glitter of gold. While most schools enjoy occasion to celebrate a single standout year, Wellington College have had only three without such cause. And yet, despite more than two decades as the nation's best, the class of '97 proved to be their best yet, taking five of six possible firsts back to the trophy cabinets of their Mt Victoria home.

Indeed 1997 marked a year of firsts for the school, coach Neville Paul pointing out, "believe it or not Ben Ruthe's win was the school's first senior boy's title; Ben won the junior title two years ago, Gray Packer won the juniors in '82 and Nick Buck this year, but we'd never had a senior individual win."

So how does this school keep producing the county's best kids? Seems it started in the late 1970s, with one Brian McCrea; current coach Neville Paul taking up the story "my involvement has only been since 1986, everything I've done is just a progression on what McCrea taught me. I took his schedules and adapted them as I went along. He was a good coach, but like Lydiard, he was a hell of a motivator, he was perceptive, he knew what made a certain kid tick and that produced an atmosphere. McCrea was more the team man than myself; I get results out of individuals, but he knew how to build teams. We got beaten at Wanganui's Round the Lake Relays the other week, I'd let the team relax after the nationals and Tauranga Boys' came looking for our blood. Brian McCrea would have won that one, he would have kept that team focused." Neville Paul fails to point out, however, that while Wellington was beaten for the wins, in terms of depth they remain second to none, winning both senior and junior 'B' grades.

Brian McCrea though, was also noted for an ability to spot the special few within the raw talent he was given. Wellington College old boy Kevin Pugh, telling a favourite McCrea tale, "the story we always used to hear was how Wayne Duckett (a future NZ junior champion and senior silver medallist) turned up for cross country as a tiny third former and on the very first run collapsed with an asthma attack. McCrea took him under his wing and the guy went from strength to strength." Neville Paul adding, "McCrea always classed kids in two categories, 'manufactured and natural', Simon Jessop was a natural, and a guy Alan Kilminster, he used to turn up and run 1.54 800s off nothing. Duckett and Dallas McCallum as manufactured, kids who, with a lot of work, were as good as anyone. I put Ben Ruthe somewhere in the middle, in that he's nothing special on no training, but has done great things on limited training."

Indeed a lot of kids from the McCrea stable grew to become national class seniors; Duckett, McCallum and Tim Crawford to name three. But still the tales of yesteryear point more toward his ability as a talent scout; Neville Paul continuing, "the guy would have been a great scout for American universities, I remember him saying to Graham Tattersall once, 'I'll find them and you perfect them.' And find them he did, Kevin Pugh adding, "we had huge squads back then, thirty guys at New Zealand Secondary Schools". Indeed it was McCrea the team man who started the cross country teams overseas trips to Australia and the U.S, six since 1978.

In 1986, however, things changed, Brian McCrea handed the reigns over to a young Neville Paul. Wellington College kept on winning, but with a different style .... "I'm not the team builder that McCrea is", admits Neville Paul, "I prefer to work on getting the best out of an individual, and we get good results that way, but perhaps we don't have the numbers that Brian had."

Neville Paul's contribution has been an eye for refinement, his knowledge a combination of McCrea and Paul's own grounding in the sport as a 1.55 800m runner under Otago's Lyn Rayner. Paul revealing, "I started late, in my twenties, and Lyn Rayner was guiding Roger Johnson, national record holder for the 400m hurdles. Johnson got a track scholarship to UCLA and he bought a lot of knowledge back with him. So really my grounding is in what I learnt off 'Rocky' Raynor, Brian McCrea and of course Lydiard. But as I learnt more I felt the typical New Zealand approach too basic. I remember attending a seminar years ago, John Davies and Dick Quax were the guest speakers. They were calling for a return to the hard core Lydiard system, saying things like, nothing's changed since Peter Snell's day, we've still got the same arms and legs', and I thought, that's just silly, I mean, what's Peter Brock driving at Bathurst, a 1960's Holden or a 1990's Holden? So much more is known now, where's the plyometric, technique and power training that Europeans have been doing for years. I've picked this up following the coat tails of our sprint coach, Alan Yip, and Matthew Coad's coach, Alan Coulston. They taught me that technique training, even for a distance runner, will make them more efficient which will improve their speed; Ben Ruthe has been working with Alan Yip a lot and he's showing the benefits. Really though my training logic revolves around specifics, you can apply the physiological principles, but at the end of the day if you want a kid to break four minutes for 1500m, you have to condition him to run sixty four second laps, anything else is just a means to that end."

But what's this, a school coach questioning the methods of Olympic medallists? Well he wouldn't be the first, and with coaching qualifications to IAAF level 3, Neville Paul certainly seems qualified to question. Some might consider all this somewhat serious for athletes so young. But as New Zealand rep' Barry Prosser, who, with son Hayden running at Wellington College, has a vested interest, says, "yeah I thought it was all a bit much at first, but as Neville said, they're kids, they'll only do half what you set them anyway." Indeed it's hard to argue with Paul's results, Hayden Prosser coming fourth at this year's secondary school cross country champs.

So why, then, do so few move on from the grounds of Wellington College? Neville Paul believes the sport lacks a social side, "cross country's not bad, but look at Newtown any Saturday in the summer, there's nothing for them. Our head boy, he's a brilliant scholar and a keen runner, he's run 4.06 for 1500m so he's running at a good level, but he's not a Ben Ruthe. Long term, there's very little for him in running, and more going for him elsewhere, so he'll probably drift away." Paul thinks, though, that he can pick the ones who will continue, saying, "there's a long term focus needed to succeed as a runner."

One would imagine, then, there to be a certain satisfaction with those that stay on within the sport; Neville Paul agreeing, "yeah guys like Reece Buck and Phil Spratley, top runners, Reece is on a US scholarship now and Sprats has just come back from one. Reece was a coach's dream, reliable, he'd never crap out. Actually he was our first guinea pig, everything that Ben Ruthe is doing now we learnt through Reece. Also though, guys like Kevin Pugh who didn't standout at school, but are still running today. Another guy, Dave Hollaway, sent me a letter after our success at the nationals. He was no great shakes as a runner, but him and others like him, they still take an interest. I get letters and calls from all these old boys, Spratley rang me after the nationals, so yeah it's satisfying."

So what, then, of the future of Wellington College's cross country tradition? A twenty four year tradition second to none, in the guiding of raw talent. A tradition likely to continue for another twenty-four years.
